

I oppose the Consumer Bankers Association's petition to weaken the protection of the Indiana Do-Not-Call List. This list as currently enforced has made a significant positive impact on my daily life, and I do not wish for bankers, or anyone else for that matter, to be able to contact me against my wishes to market their products. Banks have the ability to contact former customers via mail, and there is no compelling need to allow banks the special right to ignore the clearly stated desire of the public who have enrolled in the Indiana Do-Not-Call List and do not wish to receive such calls.
